

STRUCTURING ARGUMENTS WITH 'PEEL'

Good arguments have a clear structure. It can help to plan your arguments by thinking 'PEEL':

P	Point	a short statement or headline that makes it clear what your argument is about
E	Explanation	an explanation of why the point is true, and why it is important. It clarifies & expands on all parts of the topic sentence
E	Evidence or example	a statistic or story that illustrates the point and makes it easier for the audience to understand. Use examples, statistics, quotations & references to support the central argument.
L	Link	a connection back to the point to bring everything together. Link the point to the overall debate

This poster is designed and edited by @chooMantra's @RajeevGM to help pupils understand concept of PEEL and help them structure their arguments in a debate. This is lovingly dedicated to memory of late Dr. G. H. Mavinkurve. Download this at <https://choomantra.com/downloads>

P	We should ban homework – because it stops children from having fun.
E	Childhood is meant to be a time to have fun and play about, as well as learning. Homework makes us spend all of our time outside of school working, just like in school, so we don't have time to play.
E	For example, this week I wanted to play cricket with friends, but I had too much homework, so I couldn't. This is bad. There is a saying "All Work And No Play Makes Jack A Dull Boy"
L	Since children are meant to have fun, and homework gets in the way - we should ban homework.
